I laughed nervously. "You're not sterile."
Silence rose out of the phone toward me like thick smoke. Then I heard a taut exhale.
"Are you serious? You're kidding, right? This is probably the worst time for us to have a new baby." The irritation in his voice was unmistakable. "I can't believe it. How could this have happened?"

Suddenly the smile I'd had all morning vanished. Kelly lowered his voice, but there was no warmth in it.

"Pat, I don't want another baby. Listen, I'll support your decision either way, but I want you to know I don't want this baby."

My mind raced on. He decided just like that.... "I don't want that baby." My knees folded beneath me and I slumped down on the couch. He said it so easily!

"I'll make appointment with Dr. Poppy," I said in an irritated voice. Dr. Ruth being a lady, I couldn't see her this time.

"That's a very good idea," he answered too quickly.

I felt betrayed. Why did he react the way he did? Couldn't he at least be curious about my own dreams? Why didn't he ask, "How do you feel about this? What do you want, Pat?" My shock at his reaction puzzled me.

Two days later I drove downtown to Dr. Poppy's gynaecology clinic.

"Well, Pat, it's been a long time since I last saw you," Dr. Poppy said cheerfully before closing the door behind him. "So, Pat how have you been?"

"Pretty good." I wanted to sound normal. "I'm here because I'm pregnant, and I'm concerned about possible complications, considering my age and my medical background."

"I've managed patients with kidney transplants through successful pregnancies, and I feel confident we can do the same for you."

"Dr. Poppy, my marriage is pretty shaky. What about the possibility of an abortion?"

"Pat! Pat! You know I'm a Christian and I can't do that. I advise you to keep your baby. Don't worry; we'll take good care of the pregnancy. Everything will be alright."

"Dr. Poppy, you don't understand. If I keep this baby, my marriage will crumble."

"Well, in that case, look for some other doctor. I'm afraid I can't help you."

(Patricia A. Bigliardi, Beyond the hidden pain of abortion, adapted.)
